APPA 2014 will be held July 21-23 in San Diego, which means there are only five weeks left before the event of the year for educational facilities management professionals. APPA 2014's general sessions, concurrent sessions, and other offerings deliver the insight you need to succeed in your mission. Don't miss sessions including:

How the History of Higher Education in the United States Can Help Us Think About the Future
An APPA 2014 General Session

Higher education has a long and diverse history in the United States. Many scholars observe that we have had the messiest but also the most transformative system in the world, so much so that numerous foreign societies model their systems on parts of our own. This lecture will describe the most pioneering and enduring elements of the American higher education system, and what we can learn from them for the uncertain reforms of our present era. The lecture will interrogate continuing dilemmas, and it will offer some historically informed paths for thinking about access, distance learning, diversity, and finance.

In addition to this session, you'll also be able to choose from 55 concurrent sessions on topics including breaking the deferred maintenance cycle, building a capital project transaction management system, energy efficiency, green cleaning, zero-waste football, and many more. Learn more about the knowledge-packed sessions planned for APPA 2014, and register for the conference, at www.appa.org/training/APPA2014/index.cfm.

Due to several editing and proofreading errors, numerous typographical errors were published in the Membership Matters column of the May/June issue of Facilities Manager. The article, "How You Can Help APPA Partner With HBCUs," was written by Chris Ziolkowski of Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University and the SRAPPA rep to APPA's Membership Committee. ## Participate in an Important Survey on Mentoring Programs

As part of his CFaR research project, John Morris of Northern Arizona University is studying the interest of APPA members in mentorship programs for educational facilities professionals. Several APPA regions have started mentoring programs, and this survey will help determine if there is sufficient interest to continue developing additional programs at the regional and/or chapter levels. Some members are also mentees to current APPA leaders. Please take a few minutes to help provide answers to these important questions via the following survey link <https://www.surveymonkey.com/s/ZT3BJDF>. The deadline for your completed survey is Wednesday, June 25. Thank you for your participation. John will report on the results through APPA.

Access the Operational Guidelines Trilogy E-Book

APPA's popular book series, Operational Guidelines for Educational Facilities, is now available in an easy-to-access (via Internet), easy-to-use e-book format, and ready to read on your computer, tablet, or smartphone. Note that you need an Internet connection to access the e-books. The books in the Operational Guidelines Trilogy include Custodial (third edition), Grounds (second edition), and Maintenance (second edition). The new "flip-file" e-books allow you to easily navigate to the chapter or section you need. Text is completely keyword searchable. The price for the new flip-file e-books are the same as the printed book—each title costs $85 for APPA member institutions, or $110 for nonmembers. Order at www.appa.org/bookstore.

National Institute of
BUILDING SCIENCES

An Authoritative Source of Innovative Solutions for the Built Environment

NIBS Releases 2013 Annual Report

The National Institute of Building Sciences (NIBS) and its members help shape the built environment of America using a balanced approach to address some of the most intriguing and perplexing problems facing the U.S.'s housing and building community. The Institute's recently released Annual Report provides an overview of what its members, volunteers, and staff have accomplished during the past year. Regarding educational facilities, the report notes that protecting our children in a safe school environment is a priority to securing our future. NIBS is working with the U.S. Department of Homeland Security (DHS) Science and Technology (S&T) Directorate to develop an Integrated Rapid Visual Screening (IRVS) Process to Assess and Design Safe Schools. Using technology initially developed to assess the risk of buildings, mass transit stations, and tunnels to terrorist attacks, the Institute assisted DHS S&T in 2013 to adapt the IRVS assessment tool to evaluate school facilities, identify vulnerabilities, and focus resources on achieving a greater level of safety within educational facilities without increasing operational costs. Learn more about NIBS' accomplishments as well as its resources including the National Clearinghouse for Educational Facilities in the 2013 annual report.

Knox College Transitions to Renewable Energy

After the college's energy contract ended and the Presidential Task Force on Sustainability suggested renewable energy be the focus of a new contract, Knox College signed a new one-year agreement that will provide it with 100 percent renewable energy. The transitions made on campus were minimal. The only difference in the new contract is that the company Knox pays for its energy now obtains that energy from renewable sources. Learn more.

U.S. Cement Consumption Growth Continues in 2014

Weather, other factors caused weakening, but fundamentals in place for recovery

Although recent economic indicators point to a tempering of the U.S. economy, the Portland Cement Association (PCA) is maintaining its forecast for steady growth in construction and cement consumption during the next five years. A recent PCA forecast indicates a 7.9 percent increase in cement consumption for 2014, almost double from the 4.5 increase in 2013. The industry expects to see double-digit growth in 2015 and 2016, with 10 percent growth both years.
